One rule: keep it clean, please.

That said, we can begin sharing innocent mistakes we made, be it when we were kids or even now.

I'm going to start us off:

I think I was in first grade? Something like that. My friend's older brother had a Kindle Fire, and my friend and I thought that it was the coolest thing. My tooth fell out. It was my second tooth that had fallen out, but everyone had made such a fuss over the first one that I was embarrassed and threw it in the trash can. Of course, my parents found out before dinner (I didn't know the Tooth Fairy's secret identity (my dad) back then--I found out in third grade). So I wrote a note to the tooth fairy. I believe it went something like this: "Dear Tooth Fairy, you can find my tooth in the trash can because I accidentally threw it away. Please bring me a Kindle Fire, but if it's too heavy for you to carry, then bring me a My Little Pony. Thank you, _____."
Of course, in the morning, I recieved a 2 dollar MLP figurine. If only you'd known, 7 year old me, you could have gotten a Kindle Fire! Oh well.

I, like Atlas, also left the site for a while. I wish I would've stayed.

Yeah, I'm fine! The first time it happened i tripped with a sparkler.
The second time I was just way too close to a fire and didn't notice until it was too late.

This wasn't a mistake I made, but it's still funny.

A few years ago, my dad, the health physicist who works at a nuclear power plant, made a potato explode in our microwave. He said "I thought I set the timer to 7:00 [seven minutes], but I guess I accidentally pressed 7 twice." ~~The microwave eventually broke, and we now use it as a breadbox~~

One time my brother put a searing hot pan on the vulnerable countertop. We still can't get the thin brown circle off the counter. ~~(Though tbh I've made many more mistakes :'D)~~

I put a piece of bread into a microwave oven and set it to ten thinking it was ten seconds, not ten minutes. Well, ten minutes later my brother asked me what happened to my bread, I told him I had put it in the microwave oven to toast it. Well he looked at me then went inside to find the bread on fire. He then had to take it outside so the fire could consume it. (I guess I am glad someone's hunger was satisfied that day even though it wasn't mine.)

~~Oh, where do I begin?~~

Ok, so last year I took a box of store-bought scones out of the freezer because I had nothing else to eat for breakfast. The instructions said to put it in a toaster oven or a normal oven. I assumed a toaster oven and a microwave were the same things. Big mistake. When I went to take them out of the microwave they were completely burnt and smoke came out for like three hours straight and the smell didn't go away for a week. I also almost set myself on fire one day when I was making a grilled cheese sandwich but that's a whole different story.

When I was younger I got my glasses, but I had to set them down every time I read. I liked to sit on the floor, and that was fine — except my glasses were the same color as the carpet. I would, every day, for several months, lose them after reading hour. I, like any sensible child, stumbled around my blurry world crying for ten minutes or so until I found the glasses again it never occurred to me to, say, not sit on the floor,,,
